

EDITORIAL

Here is one more issue of our Magazine in circulation. It has been delayed due to a lack of infrastructure because of financial resources.

The authors who sent their originals in some time ago will be the first to celebrate.

Our readers can also celebrate, because the articles in this issue have ideas which are interesting at any time, and other texts which are the result of pioneer research and can be widely used.

The diversity and breadth of the subjects under research in the articles, both the original and review, reflect the very profession and its involvement with research: just as light striking a prism and breaking down into the colors of the rainbow, the objects of our professional practice are illuminated (in research) by a kaleidoscope of methods and theoretical and philosophical references. This results in the living movement of building knowledge in nursing.

Once again, as Brazilian nursing researchers, we are to be congratulated for the hard work of research and publishing of knowledge for the review and qualification of practices: service, teaching and research itself.

Enjoy your reading.
